AKC Honors Canine Heroes with New Wilderness Search and Rescue Title

From AKC.org, June 05, 2013

New York, NY— Wilderness Search and Rescue dogs, who use their air scenting or tracking abilities to locate missing persons, typically in a non-urban setting, will now be recognized by the American Kennel Club® (AKC®) with the new SAR-W title. The AKC already acknowledges dogs that are FEMA or State Urban Search and Rescue (SUSAR) certified as Urban Search and Rescue Dogs.

Within the field of Wilderness Search and Rescue there are dogs that specialize in tracking, trailing, air scent, water and avalanche search and rescue.

“Search and Rescue is a valuable, modern day working activity for our dogs. At the time of greatest need, when we’re looking to find lost or trapped people, human remains, or help others during disasters, SAR dogs and their handlers are there to provide their assistance,” said Doug Ljungren, AKC Vice President of Companion/Performance Events. “The AKC is proud to acknowledge skill and service of these dogs by offering the new SAR-W title to add to their AKC record.”

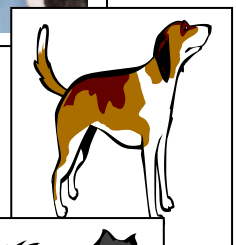

The handlers of Wilderness Search and Rescue dogs that have been deployed on at least five SAR missions and that have been certified by an AKC recognized SAR certification organization may request a title by downloading and completing this form. The dog must be AKC registered or enrolled in the AKC Canine Partners program. The handler is required to submit the dog’s SAR certification document and documentation verifying the dog’s deployments. For more information please contact Lisa Carroll at 919-816-3900 or performanceevents@akc.org.

In addition to the SAR titling program, AKC’s affiliate AKC Companion Animal Recovery has long supported search and rescue organizations through its AKC CAR Canine Support and Relief Fund. The Fund recently awarded $413,000 in grants to more than 140 SAR groups in 45 states. To learn more about the program or how Wilderness SAR dog groups can apply for a future grant, visit <http://www.akccar.org/givingback/>.

Director's Letter

From AKC Taking Command , May 2013

This month marks a year since the USDA division that is responsible for enforcing the Animal Welfare Act (AWA), the Animal and Plant Health and Inspection Service (APHIS), proposed an administrative rule change that would impact a wide variety of breeders.

The proposed rule would have a number of effects, but those most dramatically impacted would likely be small/hobby breeders who sell relatively few dogs. The proposed rule would require those who own more than four "breeding females" and who transfer one or more pets sight unseen to obtain USDA licensing and comply with regulations designed for large commercial/wholesale kennels. The term "breeding female" is not defined, but would include multiple species including dogs and/or cats.

If adopted in its current form, this proposal would have many unintended consequences and create unreasonable hardships on small/hobby breeders. It would threaten the future of a vast number of small responsible dog breeders, and even the existence of some rare breeds in the United States.

During the public comment period AKC submitted extensive formal comments, which included a copy of AKC's online petition to protect small hobby breeders. More than 71,000 concerned individuals signed the petition by the August 13, 2012 deadline.

In the past month, APHIS has completed a review of the comments it received and has submitted a draft final rule, which takes substantive comments received into consideration, to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review. No further information has been made public about what is in the final rule. Once the rule is reviewed by the OMB, USDA will likely issue a final version of this rule in the Federal Register. Visit AKC GR's online Regulations Resource Center to read the proposal and obtain the latest information.

AKC GR continues to express concerns about the proposed rule to members of Congress, APHIS and the OMB. We encourage you to do the same.

All the best, Sheila Goffe, Director, AKC Government Relations

Extra Credit - The Blue Lacy is medium in size with a light, balanced yet powerful build. Correct Lacy movement alludes to great speed, strength and dexterity. Its coat is short and sleek. There are three permissible color varieties. Blues are any shade of gray from light silver to dark charcoal. Reds range from light cream to rust. The tri combines these colors with a blue base and distinct red markings as appropriate for trim. White can appear on the chest, stomach and paws. Both the red and tricolored Lacys hold the name Blue Lacy due to the blue-color gene they possess. Lacys are intelligent, intense, active, and alert. Originally created to work feral hogs, the Lacy was developed into an all-around working breed for ranchers, cowboys, hunters and trappers. They have incredible drive and determination. Bold and brave, they excel at herding cattle and hunting wild boar. They are naturally territorial and will protect their property. Though Lacys make excellent companions, they don't do well with passive owners. This breed needs a calm yet assertive leader who establishes clear rules. Lacys also need consistent mental and physical exercise. Due to their intelligence, they can be quickly trained to perform many tasks.

Two New Lively Breeds Join AKC Family

The Portuguese Podengo Pequeno and Chinook Gain Full AKC Recognition

from www.akc.org

The American Kennel Club® (AKC®) expanded its litter of recognized breeds on January 1 to welcome the Portuguese Podengo Pequeno and Chinook, growing AKC's family to 177 breeds. In addition, the AKC also welcomed the Lagotto Romagnolo and Berger Picard into the Miscellaneous Class. "The AKC is thrilled to add these lively and energetic breeds to the registry giving dog lovers even more breeds to choose from," said AKC Spokesperson Lisa Peterson. "Both breeds are very athletic and will make great companions for those who love to stay active."

An American breed joining the Working Group, the Chinook was bred as a sled dog for drafting and sled dog racing in New Hampshire. The breed was later named the state dog of New Hampshire in 2009. Chinooks enjoy activities such as backpacking, skijoring, sledding, jogging, and hiking with their families. They are especially fond of children and get along well with other dogs. They are playful, highly trainable, and adaptable. Their tawny-colored double coat requires occasional bathing and brushing. Additional facts on this breed can be found on the Chinook Club of America's website at: <http://www.chinookclubofamerica.org>.

The Portuguese Podengo Pequeno joins the Hound Group. The breed is known for its small size, erect ears, and wedge shaped head. Bred to hunt in harsh terrains, they use sight, scent, and sound to catch their prey-typically rabbits. They have two coat types, smooth and wire. This breed is active, intelligent, and easy to train. They require regular exercise but should be kept on a leash or in a fenced yard due to their instinct to chase. Additional facts on this breed can be found on the Portuguese Podengo Pequenos of America's website at: www.pppamerica.org.

To become an AKC recognized breed there needs to be a certain number of dogs geographically distributed throughout the U.S. and an established breed club of responsible owners and breeders. Breeds working towards full recognition are recorded in AKC's Foundation Stock Service® (FSS®). More information on the process can be found at akc.org.
